1. Narrator: Example.

Emily: Hello, I'm here today with Greg Taylor, from Sports World Magazine.

Greg: Hello, Emily.

Emily: So, Greg. You want to get young people to play more sports, is that right?

Greg: Yes, I do. A lot of teenagers don't do any exercise or sports. They should at least do two and a half hours of exercise every week.

Emily: Don't they play team games like soccer or basketball at school?

Greg: Yes, but we're also looking for activities they can do by themselves.

2. Emily: So, what sports can they do by themselves?

Greg: There are a lot of sports they can do by themselves. When I was a P.E. teacher, I told my students to go running and cycling in their free time.

Emily: And did they?

Greg: Yes, now one of them is a professional cyclist. He cycled to school by himself every day.

3. Emily: What about swimming? That's something you can do by yourself.

Greg: Yes, and swimming is very good for you, but not everyone has a swimming pool near them.

Emily: Are there any sports you can do at home by yourself?

Greg: Yes, there are a few. My daughter does yoga at home. She doesn't go to a class. She watches a yoga video and does it by herself.

4. Emily: Is there anything P.E. teachers can do?

Greg: Yes, they should show their students some sports they can do by themselves. In most P.E. lessons, they play big team games. Teachers should show them some individual sports or sports they can play with just two people.

Emily: Like what?

Greg: Like badminton. I play badminton with my wife every Sunday. Most of the time we play by ourselves and sometimes we play with friends.

Narrator: Now listen again and check.
