In many countries nowadays, electricity, gas and water are not luxuries but necessities. Companies which produce household goods realize that consumers want products that both work effectively and save money. In North America, for example, household lighting accounts from 10% to 15% of the electric bill, so this amount can be reduced by replacing an ordinary 100-watt light bulb with an energy-saving one. Consumers can save about US$7 to US$21 per bulb. In Europe, when you buy electrical goods such as refrigerators, freezers and washing machines, there is a labeling scheme telling you how energy efficient each model is, so you can compare different appliances and then choose which one to buy. The final result is that these innovations will save money as well as conserve the earth's resources.
